

MorphoSource Download Use Agreement

By downloading these files (images, models, etc.), I agree to comply with the instructions for image citation and funding acknowledgment found on the relevant MorphoSource page for these files, as well as the following restrictions of use (including but not limited to restrictions and requirements of any copyright licenses attached to these files):

- a. Any publications, blog posts, or other digital or print references to the downloaded images and models, as well as images and models derived from the original files, will identify as the source of the image BOTH MorphoSource AND the institution (i.e., the museum collection) associated with the specimen which these media represent.
- b. Publications, blog posts, and all other digital or print media that include reference to the downloaded images/models in any way (including but not limited to measurements, analyses, discussion, images, figures, or digital or 3d printed models) will be captioned with or otherwise label/cite BOTH the institutional catalogue number (e.g., Darwin Core triplet) of the specimen this media represents AND the MorphoSource media identifiers of the downloaded files. Specifically, the MorphoSource DOI should be included when available, but if a DOI is not available, the MorphoSource media number (i.e., "M1000") and/or the MorphoSource ARK should be included.
- c. These files may not be used for commercial purposes without explicit approval in writing from the current acting curator-in-charge of the relevant collections, which might be subject to legal review by lawyers and/or licensing as per the collection's policy, unless these files are licensed in a way that allows such use (e.g., CC-0). MorphoSource staff can help with getting in touch with curators if necessary.
- d. Sharing these files, their derivatives, and/or 3D prints generated from them is only allowed if the user and the third party/parties are engaged in a non-commercial pursuit that cannot be reasonably achieved through each involved individual independently downloading the media. Some examples of allowed sharing include use of 3D prints in education or collaborative creation of derivative 3D media from downloaded files, but this is not an exhaustive list and other allowed uses exist. Generally speaking, if you know of someone who wants this file or could benefit from it, but you did not download it for the purpose of a collaborative effort with that individual, and you are not immediately collaborating with that individual in a way that requires joint access to the same version of the file, then you should not share your copy of the file with that individual. He/she should download it directly. Anyone you do share this file with is bound to this agreement. This provision does not supercede any copyright, usage license or other restrictions placed on the data by the data owner or authoritative collection. It is possible for a copyright license to impose more or less restrictions on sharing compared to this provision, and users are responsible for following both these requirements and other licenses.

I also reaffirm my knowledge of and agreement to the MorphoSource terms and conditions generally (<https://www.morphosource.org/About/termsAndConditions>).

I also acknowledge that failure to adhere to these provisions could result in revocation of downloading privileges to MorphoSource or legal ramifications for me or my institution/company in certain cases.

The terms above may be superceded by collection specific downloading agreements. If you were able to download this file without requesting permission then there are no additional/different collection specific requirements (but see the beginning of this agreement). If you had to request permission, but were granted access without being presented with a different set of requirements then there are no additional/different collection specific requirements (but see the beginning of this agreement).
